

CALL FOR PAPERS

Second European Macrohistory Workshop
26th – 28th March 2018, University of York, York, United Kingdom
Main topic: Debt Sustainability

The Department of Economics at the University of York is organizing a “European Macrohistory Workshop”, which will be held in York, UK, from 26th to 28th March 2018.

The workshop – which follows a first such event held in June 2016 at the Macrohistory Lab at the University of Bonn (Prof. Moritz Schularick) – aims to bring together economic historians and macroeconomists. Half of the sessions will be devoted to general topics at the intersection of macroeconomics and economic history, while the other half will focus on debt sustainability as one of the key issues facing developed countries in the medium and long-term. The objective of the workshop is to strengthen further the ties which have developed in recent years to great mutual advantage between economic and financial historians, on the one hand, and macroeconomists and applied economists, on the other.

Key note speakers

Prof. Barry Eichengreen (University of California, Berkeley)
Prof. Ricardo Reis (London School of Economics)

Complete manuscripts or 3-page drafts should be submitted to macrohistory-conference@york.ac.uk <mailto:macrohistory-conference@york.ac.uk> no later than 15th October (in pdf-format). We will acknowledge receipt of submission and the authors of accepted papers will be notified by 30th November.

Accommodation and travel expenses will be covered for programme participants.

Financial support from the Royal Economic Society, the University of York, University College London and the University of Bonn is gratefully acknowledged.
